| The prohibitive favorite to come off the board number 1 to the Bears. Watching the freak plays, off platform throws he makes gives you shades of Mahomes and Allen. You also see, like both of them when they came out, just how impatient he is to sit in the pocket and make throws in rhythm. "You better have the right offensive coordinator for him and do not rush him into the NFL," said an NFL scout in golong.com predraft series. The Bears will need to be patient and let him make mistakes and try to get by with his pure athleticism and elite instincts and arm talent as he develops. The other thing to watch is his demeanor and commitment. I get a strong Russell Wilson vibe when hearing and watching him. The key will be how committed he is to being great and working because all of the tools are there. | | | 👊 Arm Strength 🏃 Speed 🦅 Instincts ⚡ Athleticism 🔥 Sizzle 🎯 RAw 🦋 Can put on the cape/carry team 🏈 Dual Threat ☐ Ups and Downs 🎲 High Risk | QB RATE 170.15 |

| Daniels has rare athletic ability at QB with a rocket arm. Had elite weapons at his disposal at LSU and a system made to showcase a QB. He flashes Lamar Jackson like dual threat ability, and has a dog mentality when running with the ball, which given his thin frame, may not be wise on Sunday's. If he can learn to protect himself and works to learn how to read NFL defenses, he can be special in time. Likely to go number 2 to Washington, he likely will see the field earlier than he should and will have to rely on his freakish athleticism until he develops his game. | | | 👊 Arm Strength 🏎 Roller Coaster Ride ☑ Unlimited Upside 🎲 High Risk 🐶 Has That Dog in him ☐ Undersized 🏈 Dual Threat 🕒 Age > 23 🖐 Thin Frame | QB Rate: 208.1 |

| His resume starts with National Championship starting QB, but how far it goes after that is still a question mark. He has a strong arm and an NFL build and flashed on tape the ability to make clutch, tight window throws and use his athleticism to buy extra time in the pocket. He was highly efficient in the short and intermediate range, but at best his grade gets an incomplete in a system that relied much more on a power running game and stout defense to win games. He may be the ultimate, prototypical game manager with a winners moxie. e needs to learn how to adjust adjust his fastball and layer the ball to the different levels. Right now he is a one pitch fastball pitcher only. I have him projected to the Patriots, who may see shades of Brady when they see him in his Michigan uniform. Like Brady, he has some odd idiosyncrasies that will be interesting to watch in the NFL. | | | 💎 Polished 👊 Arm Strength ⏳ NFL Ready ☑ Limited Upside 😎 Cool w/ pressure/ Clutch 🖥 System aided 🦋 Good/Bad Traits 🦋 Just an average guy | QB Rate: 167.42 |

| I get strong Sam Darnold vibes watching him. He has the arm, the size, seems like a natural. It all looks good on paper, then you watch him make mind numbing decisions when pressured and you wonder what went wrong. He is the quintessential boom or bust candidate in this draft. If a coach can tap into the physical abilities, they could have a true franchise QB, but I think that natural playmaking instinct is just not there. "He's got all the physical tools," a scout said in the golong.com series. "Sometimes there's some wiring ... there's some Daniel Jones in there. | Nix turned his career around when he transferred to Oregon and proved to be one of the most efficient college QBs in the nation. The question is, how much of his game translates to Sunday's. He will need to be in a passer friendly, West Coast like system, to take advantage of his plus accuracy, intelligence and timing. However, he does not have an NFL arm, and teams will soon learn to flodd the short and intermediary areas to take away those easy throws. | Exploded on the scene with a spectacular season that propelled Washington to the National Championship game. After a creer riddled with injuries, Penix stayed healthy and showed flashes of brilliance. He had the advantage of throwing to a group of elite recievers, at least three and possibly four will hear their names called in the top 100 picks. Penix throws a beautiful deep ball, but the injuries and age are a major concern when projecting his game forward. Still, he is worth taking a flier on in the second round. | Rattler is a scrappy, tough undersized QB with a strong arm. He played behind a terrible line but did have one elite weapon in Xavier Legette to target. Much of his tape is riddled with chaos. "Makes one read, erratic thrower, panics when things break down. He guns everything. Doesn't have much accuracy or touch. He's got a little bit of moxie but he's just a nut the way he plays. | One of the most polished receivers to come out in a generation. His route running, length, hands, speed and athletic ability are elite in every way. I rarely say a prospect is can't miss, but everything on the field he does translates to Sundays. Only some unforeseen off the field issues could derail what should be a HOF type career. I made it to OSU for a game two years ago. It was impressive to watch him getting in and out of breaks, gains separation, seemingly so easily, and catches everything thrown his way. | In any other year, Odunze would be a sure fire number one receiver, but even if you stack him third as I do, you have to appreciate the combination of size, athleticism, speed and hands. By all accounts he matches his natural abilities with a tough, competitive fire. Despite ranking him behind Harrison and Nabers from a pure talent perspective, if I were building a team, Odunze would be the one I most wanted in my lockerroom. | This is my guy for the Bills. I went into studying him with a natural bias against smaller, track star receivers, but soon came away obsessed with what he can do at the next level. Yes, that speed is electric, and he displays a second and third gear that is unmatched. However, what blew me away, given his frame, is just how tough and fiery he was, taking on tacklers, going over the middle fearlessly, and making picture perfect blocks downfield. This kid is fast, but he is no track star only, he is a football player and a true dog. His hands and route running are vastly underrated as well. Teams will have to respect the speed, and as one scout in the Go Long article said, teams will have to back the fuck up when he is on the field. | A dominant, size/ speed true X receiver. Receivers with his combination of speed, size, athleticism and hands are rare and day one, he should be able to spread the field and make chunk plays downfield. However, the rest of his game will need to develop and he will have to prove he is willing to fight for critical yards to move the chains or go over the middle without fear. | One of the more fun prosepcts to watch as he dominated the Subdivision competition. He led the nation is yards after catch, and is a straight up bulldog with the ball in his hands. He's a poor man's Deebo Samuel and can be used as a versatile weapon in a similar way. | There was a point this season, I though Coleman was a sure fire first round, true future number one X receiver. Then he disappeared for periods, both in games and for games. He timed poorly at the combine, but displayed the play speed and hands evident on Saturdays in the position drills and other athletic tests. He offers very little in YAC ability, and struggles to gain seperation, but he may be the most talented contested catch prospect in this class after Odunze. | Mitchell may be the most polarizing WR in this class. Some see the immense potential of an elite athlete with a freakish catch radius who should be able to dominate at the next level. However, that has to be a projection, because he never produced significantly in college, outside of the spectacular highlight here and there. Watching him play, you see he takes plays off, admittedly runs routes at only 70%, doesn't consistantly put forth effort to block, and you come away underwhelmed. You can blame the QB play, or strategy to preserve energy between routes run your way, but then you see Worthy lighting it up, giving maximum effort every down on the other side of the field. I understand why some have him higher, but he would not be on my board if I were in charge of the draft room. The golang article revealed he is a diabetic, and that may be a reason, but it is no excuse for the lack of effort visible on the field. | | | <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Elite Speed <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Plus Size/Speed Ratio <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Body Catcher <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Unlimited Potential <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Takes Plays off <input type="checkbox"/> Lazy on field <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> 1 Hit (Yr) Wonder <input type="checkbox"/> Diabetic | RAS: 9.98 |

| Where Worthy dispelled by bias against smaller, track star receivers, Franklin brought me back to reality. You have to love and teams will need to respect the game breaking electric speed of Franklin. However, right now, he is more track star than football player. I would still take a chance late day 2 on that speed, but he will need time to become a complete player and seems to lack some essential abilities, namely the ability to track the ball in the air at times. | | | <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Elite ATHleticism <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Speed to Burn <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Explosive Playmaker <input type="checkbox"/> Slight Frame <input type="checkbox"/> Bills Fit-30 Visit | RAS: 8.48 |
